GETTING FUNDING

Finding the funds for schoolwide SAT and ACT prep courses isn't as difficult as you might think. Yes – there will be some paperwork involved, and you may need to get permission from a few people along the way, but most educators believe it's worth it to be able to provide high quality test prep to every student in school.

Federal funding is available through the following programs: Title I - Improving the Academic Achievement of the Disadvantaged, Title IID – Enhancing Education Through Technology (EETT), Title IV – 21st Century Schools, Title V, Part A – Promoting Informed Parental Choice and Innovative Programs, Title VI, Part B – Rural Education Initiative, Title VII – Indian, Native Hawaiian, and Alaska Native Education, IDEA – Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, GEAR UP - Gaining Early Awareness and Readiness for Undergraduate Programs, TRIO programs - Talent Search and Upwardbound

OUR SUCCESS

Brentwood High School in New York Sees an SAT Improvement of 116 Points!

PROBLEM- Like many high school students, the students at Brentwood High School, in New York were doing no preparation before taking the SAT or ACT. The school does not have the same “college-going culture” as some of the higher socio-economic, adjacent districts. For many students, English is also a second language.

Educators at Brentwood High School were challenged with trying to change ideas about the SAT and ACT, including showing students that these tests can and should be prepared for. The reality at the school is that, on average, many students are only going to put in 3-5 hours of SAT or ACT prep total.

SOLUTION- Brentwood High School was looking for a program that could make a significant difference even with a limited number of hours of student engagement. With Method Test Prep’s SAT online course and ACT online course to every student as part of an initiative to create a college-going culture at the school.

Method Test Prep helped the guidance, math and English departments understand the programs, and gave them instructions on integrating the online prep programs into their classrooms.

RESULTS- Students saw improvement in their scores even if they just spent a minimum amount of time with the online test prep program. Students spending just 1 to 5 hours with Method Test Prep saw an increase of 97.1 points on average.

When students spent more time with the program, they had even better results. Students spending 5 to 10 hours total saw an average score increase of 116.5 points. One Brentwood High School ESL student used the program on her own at home, and was able to memorize 121 of the most common SAT vocabulary words in just one week!

ENDORSEMENT- Wayne Abenes, the Director of Guidance at Brentwood High School, is happy that the school is offering an SAT and ACT test preparation option to every student in the district, regardless of income. He continues to bring the message to his students that they can raise their SAT and ACT scores and achieve higher scores by using our online test prep courses.
